

Statistical Table

There are nine hundred and thirty-four letters in the corpus of Cicero's correspondence. Of this total four hundred and twenty-three are from Cicero to Atticus; four hundred and six were written by Cicero to other friends from whom he received eighty-six, and nineteen were written by his correspondents to each other. In the epistles dispatched to Cicero from his friends there are five literary quotations; in addition, one citation is found in a letter from Quintus Cicero to Tiro. Since I am dealing exclusively with the letters which were written by Cicero, these six quotations have not been included in my investigation.

The table of citations found in Cicero's letters follows:
